VOLUME 19, ISSUE 1
April, 2018

From The Chairman's desk

Dear students,

I am glad to address all of you at the commencement of another promising Academic Year (2018- 2019). The previous years' achievements are unfolded in the document that you are holding. The vividly dynamic chronicle clearly depicts our ideology of holistic learning and cements our vision and mission into life-long learning processes that empower young minds to develop into confident, assertive, and socially conscious individuals. Schools in the present day scenario are not just the dispensers of information. Today's classrooms are a far cry from the chalk and duster units of the previous generation. The 21st century classrooms are the vibrant epicentres of designing collaborators, innovators, inquirers, and future leaders. The students not only need to be equipped with the best knowledge and be content experts, but also need to develop and hone their overall personality, talent and skills. Today's classrooms, therefore, require a creative, compassionate and self-motivated teacher who is equally participative in the learning process as the students.

We, at KENNEDY HIGH, have always kept our pulse on the situation. Our constant endeavour is to upgrade our teaching pedagogy, instructional content, and most importantly, provide avenues for professional development for our teaching staff. This has enabled us to deliver the best quality education that has all the vital constituents of a 21st Century learning and teaching environment.

At this juncture, I would request the parents to focus their attention on the emotional wellbeing of our teens. We agree that the society and the environment in general is going through a tremendous change, and individually no parent or child is responsible for any wrongdoing. But as an equal stakeholder in the child's emotional and physical development, we request the parents to demarcate clear boundaries of social conduct, financial freedom, appropriate choices in clothing, language, and assess their digital footprint. Please provide ample room for neutral discussions at home, set ground rules, be firm and consistent about them, and make the consequences of non-compliance of these rules clear to the child. This will make youngsters comprehend the necessity of following and respecting authority and they would receive feedback and corrections at school in an amicable manner.

I sincerely hope that with our coordinated efforts, the youth will steer towards a path of positive thoughts and actions.

Wishing everyone a very successful year ahead.
